1. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

1.1 The UK Parliament and the Parliament of Trinidad & Tobago have over many years developed productive and friendly bilateral relations. After a review of its outreach activities and with a desire to increase engagement with the Caribbean Commonwealth, CPA UK organised a cross-party delegation of six UK parliamentarians (three from the House of Commons and three from the House of Lords) to visit Trinidad & Tobago in February 2015 (postponed from November 2014).

1.2 The delegation comprised of senior parliamentarians with varied experience of Trinidad & Tobago, including a former Minister of State for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) and a Peer who previously visited in a CPA UK capacity. This gave an opportunity for the delegation to follow-up on developments since their previous visits and review progress made. All Members of the delegation had a strong familiarity with the Caribbean region, in particular Jamaica, Grenada and the Overseas Territories. As such, the entire delegation was in a position to understand the complexity of regional issues from a local perspective, thus adding to their wealth of understanding of the challenges and opportunities faced by the Parliament of Trinidad & Tobago.

1.3 The visit consisted of six days in Port of Spain, Trinidad, followed by the final day in Tobago. Based primarily in Parliament and a number of Ministries, the programme comprised of bilateral sessions with key stakeholders from across the political and civil society spectrum. The programme also took in a number of other locales such as a visit to the University of the West Indies, St Augustine Campus and Scarborough General Hospital in Tobago.

1.4 The delegation arrived in Trinidad & Tobago at an opportune time; arriving in the midst of a Cabinet reshuffle. Engaging with those most closely affected gave the delegation an unexpected and invaluable insight into Trinidad & Tobago political processes and machinations. The causes and ramifications of the sudden removal of seven parliamentarians and ministers highlighted a political culture, which to some extent is highly litigious and lacking in transparency. However, it also demonstrated Trinidad & Tobago’s free press, which reported heavily and openly on events. The delegation’s visit also coincided with the start of the election year in Trinidad & Tobago, which as in the UK, intensified partisan politics.

1.5 Although the resuffle resulted in some meetings being cancelled or moved. The delegation nevertheless met all key parliamentary and ministerial stakeholders, in particular the newly appointed Attorney General, Hon. Senator Gavin Nicholas, who was a former High Commissioner to the United Kingdom and the President of the Senate, Hon. Senator Rhazia Ahmed. The delegation participated in a number of unprogrammed meetings with civil society organisations related to Human Rights issues.

1.6 The delegation were also present for the build up to Carnival, the highlight of the Trinidadian cultural calendar. The delegation was priviledged to witness the vibrant music, fashion and exitement that encapsulates Carnival season. It was clear to the delegation how proud the people across both Islands were in this world-famous event and its importance to culture, tourism and community spirit.

1.7 As outlined in the following report, the visit achieved its aim by enabling the UK parliamentary delegates to understand better the challenges faced by their colleagues in Trinidad & Tobago. Participants came away with a greater insight into the workings of the House of Representatives and the Senate; current processes and future developments as well as wider national and regional topicalities such as criminal justice, climate change, investment, energy and infrastructure and human rights. The programme has also resulted in a number of follow-up actions and outcomes for CPA UK to take forward.

4. PROGRAMME DETAILS AND COMMENTS

4.0 Environmental Policy

4.01 As part of the visit, the delegation sought to further understand how Trinidad & Tobago continues to be affected by climate change. Like its Caribbean neighbours and small islands states across the globe, Trinidad & Tobago remains at risk to rising sea levels, coastal erosion, temperature increases and higher rainfall. As outlined by the Meteorological Office, with whom the delegation met, Trinidad & Tobago has been inflicted with a greater frequency of dryer days for longer periods of time and heavier precipitation. Changing weather pattern projections also show an increasing likelihood that by 2020-2030 Trinidad & Tobago may move directly into the Hurricane corridor (whereas it currently sits on the periphery). Combined, these changes will have a negative impact on the economy; undermining petroleum and gas industries, transport infrastructure, destruction of crops in the agricultural sector as well as increased health risks through the spread of Dengue Fever. It may also lead to the destruction of coral reefs which would have a knock-on effect on fisheries and potential development of green tourism.

4.02 Trinidad & Tobago coordinates its global environmental campaigning in line with the Alliance of Small Island States and the Caribbean Community Climate Change Centre based in Belize. This CARICOM regional body has developed a pan-Caribbean strategy for the upcoming United Nations Climate Change Conference (COP21) which occurs later in 2015. It is hoped there will be a legally binding and universal agreement on carbon emissions targets as well as a 1.5° temperature increase cap for the Caribbean as opposed to a 2° increase.

4.03 Trinidad & Tobago is continuing to work hard domestically to combat the negative effects of climate change. The delegation met with the Environmental Management Authority. The Authority, which comes under the Ministry for Housing, Land and Marine Affairs began operations in June 1995 and facilitates cooperation across the Government, NGOs and community-based organisations. The EMA is mandated to write and enforce laws and regulations for environmental management, to educate the public about the nation's environmental issues, to control and prevent pollution, as well as conserve natural resources and develop environmental impact assessments. The EMA informed the delegation of its work on developing legislation including the Solid Waste Management Rules. It also highlighted its projects such as the Nariva Swamp’s National Restoration, Carbon Sequestration, Wildlife and Livelihoods Project (NRCSWL), Climate Change institutional strengthening and renewable energy projects such as the solar-powered police surveillance bays. A number of these projects have been successful in reducing the impacts of climate change whilst creating sustainable employment and public awareness. The EMA further highlighted challenges to cclimate change mitigation strategies. The delegation were also told about the Green Fund which was set up for the purpose of remediation, reforestation, environmental education and public awareness of environmental issues and conservation of the environment.

4.04 However the public largely remains detached from the causes and consequences of climate change, in particular on the economy. For example, there is little recycling and virtually no energy efficiency ethos. Trinidad & Tobago has a continuing problem in management of waste tyres, various bodies have examined a number of possible solutions and case study but further progress is needed. The delegation highlighted the success of door to door recycling in the UK and waste to energy, both of which could be considered by the Trinidad & Tobago Government.

4.05 The Trinidad & Tobago Parliament is engaged in the sustainable development process. A joint committee looked into the EMA and was supportive in its reporting, agreeing with the problems associated with climate change. However it became clear in discussions with the EMA that more work is needed to support parliamentarians in ensuring legislation introduced is effectively implemented at a faster pace. Although intended to coordinate climate change policy across Government, the EMA is hampered by issues on implementation and policing of planning regulations, notable examples are building on hillsides susceptible to landslides. There also remains a need to manage longer-term planning. When the East Road was washed away after severe flooding there was an urgent need have it rebuilt, especially as it is a key transport access route (Trinidad & Tobago has no rail network). Yet there are no plans to redirect the road despite the likelihood of repeated flooding. It is hoped the creation of an Energy and Environment Committee will be in a position to deal with these issues.

4.06 Overall the delegation were impressed with the work of the Trinidad & Tobago Government in sustainable development policy and in particular the MO and EMA who displayed professionalism, dedication and expertise. There are a number of initiatives that should be commended, for example the Project for Ecosystem Services (ProEcoServ), which seeks to better integrate ecosystem assessment, scenario development and economic valuation of ecosystem services into sustainable national development planning.

4.07 ACTION: As part of its meetings with the Minister, the MO and EMA the delegation will undertake the following actions:

- Place the EMA and Parliament in contact with the Environmental Audit Committee, House of Commons.
- Send the EMA details relating to the EU’s Waste Electrical & Electronic Equipment (WEEE) Directive\(^8\) and other waste to energy programmes (e.g. WRAP).
- Work closely with the Parliament of Trinidad & Tobago and UNDP Country Coordinator to support parliamentary capacity in post-legislative scrutiny on topics related to the environment.

4.1 Economic Developments

4.10 UK and Trinidad & Tobago bilateral trade is worth in the region of over £300 million, the largest in the Caribbean. British companies dominate the energy sector, accounting for 85 percent of local gas production and Trinidad & Tobago is an important element in the UK’s energy security. The UK’s exports in services to the amount of £135 million.

4.11 Trinidad & Tobago is an economic powerhouse in the Caribbean, based predominantly on its Oil and Liquefied Natural Gas (LNG) supplies. This is underlined by its GDP of $23 billion, greater than the combined GDP of Barbados ($2.26 billion), Guyana ($3.4 billion) and Jamaica ($15 billion).\(^9\) Growth in Trinidad and Tobago has averaged 6 percent per year since 1994, among the highest levels in the Latin America and the Caribbean region. After a very weak performance in 2009-12, GDP growth reached a five-year high of 1.5 percent in 2013, thus demonstrating a modest recovery.\(^10\)

4.12 The delegation met with the Minister of Finance, Hon. Sen. Larry Howai who like many interlocutors highlighted the impact of the oil price drop on the global and in particular the Trinidadian economy. Based on the current price of crude oil in Trinidad & Tobago, there would be an expected TTD 7 million shortfall. As such, there will be a total deficit of TTD 4.48 billion (which was based on First Quarter projections of $45 a barrel). This would be met by currency holdings in the sovereign wealth fund, selling national assets and more importantly the postponement of planned infrastructural investment projects. These include a new port in Port of Spain, the Sullivan Island dry dock, the Endeavour Economic Industrial Park, and upgrades to a number of health facilities.\(^11\)

4.13 Nevertheless it was emphasised by the Minister that the current Government is keen to press ahead with essential social programmes to assist the vulnerable in society as well as resolving the level of inequality. This is partly due to the pay gap, which although lower than its Caribbean neighbours like Jamaica, needs further improvement. Furthermore Trinidad & Tobago has very low unemployment (3.7 percent (2013))\(^12\). Nevertheless there is a large immigrant labour force, some of which are from China. These immigrants are a consequence of Chinese governmental investment projects. With limited employment slack, it was important to provide skills and training to improve domestic labour mobility. This was reinforced in the meeting with Invest TT, an agency under the Ministry of Trade and Investment, whose core function is to assist in promoting inward investment.

into Trinidad & Tobago. They commented that the lack of sufficient skills within Trinidad & Tobago have become more evident. Hence there is a substantial need to liaise with learning and vocational bodies to improve skill-sets.

4.14 In discussions with the delegation, the Minister of Finance indicated that Trinidad & Tobago intended to set up a Centre for Arbitration to deal with contractual disputes. This is partially due to a recent ICC’s Court of Arbitration decision to value a national asset (Point Lisas-based Methanol Holdings (Trinidad) Ltd (MHTL)) at a figure substantially less than the Government had predicted.

The Minister also hoped to work more closely with the City of London in the expansion of its financial sector into Bond trading as well as increasing the capacity of back office processing. Such a proposal was met with enthusiasm by the delegation who will assist in facilitating such work.

4.15 Invest TT and the Minister also highlighted the country’s success in improving Trinidad & Tobago’s Ease of Doing Business rating. The 2015 Doing Business report shows Trinidad & Tobago moved up 12 places in the rankings from 91 out of 189 countries in 2014, to 79 out of 189 in the 2015. The delegation were impressed to learn that the reason for such progress was down to a number of regulatory reforms making it easier to start businesses as well as improvement in raising sufficient credit. Although this has led to increases in inward investment, the Leader of the Opposition and the Minister of Finance both felt the private sector was still too timid, constantly requiring Government backing and reassurances through subsidies and other mechanisms. At a meeting with the Minister for Work and Infrastructure, representing the Foreign Minister, the issue of delays and confusion of awarding UK contracts was discussed. It was pointed out that it took 2-3 years for agreements to be approved by the Cabinet and then it was not necessarily clear whether approval was actually given. As the Acting High Commissioner pointed out, this remained a disincentive for inward infrastructural investment. Furthermore, Trinidad & Tobago has been slow to engage with the Global South (South America and Africa) and the wider Commonwealth for potential investment opportunities. To aid international investment, Invest TT highlighted a number of structural and policy areas they would like to see improved, namely access to land, a reduction in bureaucracy, a more competitive workplace environment, open immigration policy and a clear national investment policy which has remained in draft since 2008.

4.16 ACTION: As part of its meetings with the Finance Minister and other economic stakeholders, the delegation will undertake the following actions:

- Examine ways in which the UK can help in the development of a Centre for Arbitration - Send this report to the Law Society and the Commonwealth Lawyers Association
- Forward report to UKTI and the Remembrancer’s Office with the aim of building closer links with the City for the development of Bond trading facilities. In addition, to assist with the development of necessary regulations as well as support with building capacity in financial back office processing
- Encourage the FCO to pursue greater prosperity programmes in Trinidad & Tobago and the wider Caribbean.

4.2 Energy Sector

4.20 Trinidad & Tobago is the 2nd highest emitter of CO\textsuperscript{2} in metric tons per capita, however this is comparatively small on a global scale due to its geographical size\textsuperscript{16}. This is predominantly due to Trinidad & Tobago's vast oil, gas and chemical industry (Trinidad & Tobago is the largest ammonia supplier in the world). The Oil and Gas industry accounts for 41 percent of the country’s economy.\textsuperscript{17} British Petroleum Trinidad & Tobago (BP TT) is the country’s largest hydrocarbon producer, accounting for about 60 percent of the nation’s oil and gas production. Of this about 65 percent of its natural gas is exported as LNG.\textsuperscript{18} British Gas Trinidad & Tobago (BG TT) accumulated 11 percent of its entire oil and gas production from Trinidad & Tobago.\textsuperscript{19}

4.21 Whilst in-country, the delegation met with the Minister for Energy and Energy Affairs and BG TT to learn more about the energy sector. However, their focus of interest was on the diversification of energy production on the Islands. The electricity sector is fuelled entirely by natural gas. This results in an overdependence on a single national resource. Two issues play the greatest concern, firstly it is expected that oil and gas reserves will be exhausted by 2025-2030 and Trinidad & Tobago is historically susceptible to commodity price fluctuations which can impact on the economy.\textsuperscript{20} There is also the environmental impact of using fossil fuels. However, there remain disincentives to move to renewable alternatives or to become more eco-efficient, namely fuel subsidies. According to the Minister, fuel remains cheap, the state subsidy makes it ten times cheaper than it should be. A point which is reiterated in the IMF Press statement which preceded the delegation’s arrival in Trinidad & Tobago [stating] “We reiterate our advice to scale down fuel subsidies, and note that the fall in global energy prices provides a unique opportunity to do this”.\textsuperscript{21} The Minister agreed that the situation needed to change. He expressed a desire to see a reduced domestic demand for fuel, so that more could be channelled to the export market. The subsidies need to be phased out in incremental stages ensuring a reduced shock to the market, perhaps including some form of compensation. Yet with an upcoming election, the delegation could not see such a policy being pursued in the short-term. A further incentive derives from the potential of the US exporting gas. With lower prices and reliable supply, the Caribbean would surely move from oil powered electricity to gas powered supply in the next 5-10 years. The delegation felt this would be an opportunity for Trinidad & Tobago to increase its exports within the region.

4.22 After a number of meetings, there was no clarity given on which energy alternatives should be pursued, or a combination thereof. Some interlocutors suggested tidal, others solar, some suggested wind. Although progress had been made to install solar panels on municipal buildings, no further advancement has been forthcoming. In meetings with InvestTT, they felt there was huge opportunity to be the leading Caribbean producer of solar panels, achievable though access to cheaper and readily available materials. The Minister was enthusiastic about a number of initiatives which the delegation put to him, such as the need for energy efficiency and in particular waste to energy.

4.3 Criminal Justice

4.30 The delegation met with a number of key stakeholders who offered an insight into areas of criminal justice in Trinidad & Tobago from policy development, enforcement and implementation. It was clear from a number of conversations that Trinidad & Tobago, despite its economic success, is plagued by organised gangs, drug trafficking and associated high murder and gun crime. A problem that permeates throughout the country and the region. Prior to the delegation’s arrival in Trinidad in February, there had already been 12 murders in 2015. Such high murder rates impact on tourism, inward investment and public safety.

4.31 A number of attributing factors were presented in the meeting with the Attorney General Hon. Sen. Garvin Nicholas and the Minister for Justice, Hon. Prakash Ramadhar MP. They stated that due to the loss of an agricultural sector there was a progressive rise in unemployed and unskilled workers who moved into criminality. This combined with Trinidad & Tobago’s geographical drug route and connected transportation of small arms from South to North America drove criminal gang numbers. But according to the Attorney General one of the most significant factors for the number of gangs was down to the UK and US’s extradition policy. They felt that deportees, who have no connection with Trinidad & Tobago are sent back to their country and have no resources or employment. Once they are deposited in Trinidad & Tobago they are then recruited into gangs. Airport officials in Trinidad & Tobago have no prior knowledge as to why they have been extradited. Both the Attorney General and Minister suggested that people should not be extradited simply because they were born in Trinidad & Tobago. The delegation agreed that if these extraditions remain, then official’s in-country should be given greater information and support in managing, monitoring and integrating these individuals so that they have alternative prospects to entering into criminal gangs.

4.32 One further reform that was suggested by the Attorney General was to decriminalise the growing and personal consumption of marijuana. As Jamaica and the US have altered their positions it would seem the right time to have a national debate on the subject. It is hoped that such a policy will free up law enforcement to focus on other drug related criminality as well as remove some of the drug trade perpetuating gang crime.

4.33 It is also hoped that such a policy will also free up prison numbers. As it currently stands, Trinidad & Tobago has an extremely high prison population with overcrowding, violence and rioting. There is also a substantial backlog of criminal court casework, with many prisoners waiting several years for their case to get to trial. Most of the judicial system is a carryover from the British colonial period, to the extent that the highest court in Trinidad & Tobago is the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council based in the UK. This is despite the Caribbean Court of Justice (a regional alternative) being established in Port of Spain. As indicated by the Leader of the Opposition, their new Government would join the CCJ, leading to quicker hearings and accessible appeals for all citizens and not just those that could afford it.

4.34 In a meeting with the Ministry of Gender, Youth and Child Development, Ministers were keen to point out their work on tackling gangs and violence prevention. They have a number of outreach programmes whereby youth officers go into homes and schools, campaigning on issues like anti-bullying. As with their older counterparts, they work in a number of ways to deal with the performance discrepancy between boys and girls as well as their ‘Youth on the Block’ scheme to target youths who congregate on street corners. This is achieved through intervention, psycho-social support and maximising opportunities for economic independence.

4.35 Trinidad & Tobago has the death penalty. Baroness Stern met with Mr Gregory Delzin, an Attorney and Anti-Death Penalty campaigner. He highlighted that although nobody has been executed since 1999, there was difficulty in amending legislation relating to the death penalty. Under the current constitution, all laws preceding the constitution cannot be considered unconstitutional. However once that legislation is amended it can be reviewed by the courts and potentially deemed unconstitutional. This creates an impasse. Any attempt to improve the law to make it fairer or tougher would instantly make it unconstitutional. Therefore the status quo will remain until steps are taken to repeal it or amend the constitution. At the meeting, it was noted that the Privy Council was reviewing a case of a man on death row in Trinidad & Tobago. However, this was viewed by many as exceeding their remit. He felt many saw the Privy Council as a body that should be examining constitutional rather than criminal cases. As the President’s legal advisor, Mr Delzin pointed out that there were many silent supporters of abolition, but were reluctant to speak out. This was reiterated by the President of Trinidad & Tobago, H.E. Anthony Carmona and the Chief Justice, Hon. Justice Ivor Archie who both emphasised passionately the importance of restorative justice when dealing with crime and marginalized groups. Mr Delzin went on to state there needs to be a public consultation on the issue. It will give the country an overdue opportunity to air grievances and debate. The European Union, who work extensively on this issue could facilitate such a consultation by providing funding support.

4.36 ACTION: As part of its meetings with the various criminal justice stakeholders the delegation will communicate with relevant organisations to undertake the following actions:

- Forward this report to the Home Office and the Crown Prosecution Service to look at the possibility of providing support to Trinidad & Tobago on the reintegration of extradited persons.
- Send report to the EU Delegation in Trinidad & Tobago to explore ways of developing a possible public consultation on the death penalty in collaboration with civil society organisations.

4.4 Domestic Violence & Victim Support

4.40 The delegation met with Ms Diana Mahabir-Wyatt, a former Senator and long-time campaigner on domestic violence, child protection and help for the vulnerable in Trinidad & Tobago. In conversation with the delegation she highlighted that Trinidad & Tobago is the capital of domestic violence in the Caribbean. The most prolific problem being violence towards women and girls as well as child battery. She emphasised that the problem has not increased to any great extent, however it has become more transparent through social media and public condemnation. An example she gave was regarding a YouTube video of a real-life mother beating her child into a near state of unconsciousness.

4.41 The delegation expressed concern over the issue of violence towards children. Some raised the point that child battery was a cultural by-product of slavery, hence is prevalence across the Caribbean. Overtime, it became the accepted form of punishment/discipline and although corporal punishment is now illegal, it was agreed that more work was needed to change perceptions.

4.42 Domestic violence permeates all levels of society, rich and poor and all faiths. Trinidad & Tobago has worked hard to deal with the problem over a number of years at a governmental and civil society level. The Prime Minister has tried to tackle the problem, setting up a Child Protection Taskforce\textsuperscript{25} across a number of Ministries. There is also an established family court and most recently the formation of the Children’s Authority\textsuperscript{26}, including assessment centres and child protection unit. This has led to greater numbers of recording and reporting of occurrences, but more work is needed. Ms Mahabir-Wyatt discussed the need for role-models to break the cycle and increase awareness. However this proves difficult when famous Caribbean musicians promote violence through their song lyrics.

4.43 Also working to reduce domestic violence and other family related crimes, the delegation met with the Witness and Victim Protection Unit. Created in 2008, it has worked to tackle sexual assaults domestic violence, child abuse and harassment. There has been a steady increase in the number of people coming into the VWSU, with reports of domestic violence peaking in 2012. As a unit it is proactive in going into remote rural areas, places like Matelot and Tobago were incest is a prevalent problem, but where reporting and engagement remains low. The delegation were impressed by their efforts and felt the UK had a great deal to learn from their example.

4.44 \textbf{ACTION:} As part of its meetings with the above groups, the delegation will communicate with relevant organisation to undertake the following actions:

- Information sharing with Ms Diana Mahabir-Wyatt on UK methods in tackling violence on sex workers
- The FCO, which has experience working in this field in other countries, should pursue programmes which would lead to a reduction in violence towards children.

4.5 LGBTI Rights

4.50 A number of the delegation met with Luke Sinnette, a youth campaigner who spoke about the current status of LGBTI rights in Trinidad & Tobago. Like much of the former British West Indies, Trinidad & Tobago has statutes against sexual acts for homosexuals carrying a twenty-five year sentence, however there are seldom convictions. Mr Sinnette expressed that there was very little chance in the short term of repealing these laws, but there was a greater chance of creating equal opportunity legislation. He highlighted cases of violent attacks especially towards transsexuals, who have difficulty finding work. There also attacks in schools. But discrimination is noticeably class related, as middleclass homosexuals and lesbians are less discriminated against.

4.51 Nevertheless there is a lot of work done to raise awareness and provide support. LGBTI civil society organisations are legally registered by the state and assistance is given especially in tackling heath issues like HIV and AIDS. There have been many vocal campaigners, many of which have originated from independent benches in the Senate, but that support has diminished over time. Work is primarily focused at grassroots level with some success, but the impact of some religious groups, such as US evangelists have a negative influence on public perception. Mr Sinnette emphasised that LGBTI groups don’t wish to have international pressure placed on Trinidad & Tobago to repeal the buggery laws, but civil society groups do need more technical support in advocacy and public awareness.

4.52 \textbf{ACTION:} As part of its meetings with Mr Sinnette, the delegation will communicate with relevant organisation to undertake the following actions:

\textsuperscript{26} http://ttchildren.org/
• Forward this report to the Royal Commonwealth Society and the Kaleidoscope Trust to explore what more can be done to provide greater technical assistance on advocacy and public awareness campaigns.

4.6 Education

4.60 The delegation met with the Minister for Education. At the meeting, the Minister gave an overview of the entire education sector. The Ministry of Education is one of the largest Ministry’s, with over 20,000 employees. There are currently around 250 primary schools, 150 secondary schools along with 3 school supervisors for each district. Theses Supervisors make visits every day to schools within their district to manage and assess their work and progress. There are a number of church-run schools which are funded by the state, but governed independently. Free education is provided until 16 years, with pupils receiving free school meals, transport, books and laptops. Although highly recognized for their educational standards, Trinidad & Tobago are considered leaders in ICT provision from across the entire Caribbean as well as their work with children with special educational needs.

4.61 The Minister highlighted that Indo-Trinidadian students have been successively improving year-on-year. In part because more schools have been expanding into rural areas. These children have continued to move in to professions from their agrarian background. He also indicated that Indo-Trinidadian parents have a greater tendency to remain together thus providing a more stable upbringing which is considered a key factor in children performing better at school. Unfortunately a number of their Afro-Trinidadian counterparts are from single families and struggle to keep up, resulting in additional pressure on teachers to take up the slack. In all, 25 percent need parental support. Schools undertake psychometric testing to identify issues early on, when identified and tackled quickly, there is a 90 percent success rate.

4.62 The delegation spent half a day at the University of the West Indies (UWI), St Augustine Campus. There the delegation met with senior academic staff, administrators and students. The delegation were told that collaboration with UK Universities has reduced over the last few years, although they do undertake DFID joint funded projects. In addition, students struggle to get the opportunity to study in the UK due to the high cost of living. On the other hand there is an abundance of students going to the US and Canada. These students will then move abroad resulting in a significant skills gap for the country. This is despite it being prohibited to leave unless you have worked for a minimum of 3 years within a specific field. However such a policy is impossible to monitor and enforce.

4.63 At a meeting with the President of Trinidad & Tobago, he pointed out that something had been lost to Caribbean students because of the University of the West Indies movement towards a greater generalisation of courses. In the past, if you wanted to study Medicine you had to leave Jamaica to study in Trinidad, and if you wanted to study law you had to go to Jamaica. This loss of specialisation has weakened a Caribbean cross-cultural fertilisation, reinforcing nationalisation over possible Caribbean integration. As Chancellor of the University of Trinidad & Tobago, he highlighted what was once a beacon of federalism, UWI had lost its way.

4.64 92 percent of students receive free tuition as well as free post-graduate degrees for those that attain first class degrees. The academic staff noted that there is a considerably higher number of female graduates to male graduates. This Caribbean-wide issue is a notable problem especially as there are fewer employment opportunities for female students. Trinidad & Tobago has a significant engineering sector, but needs to grow in a perceived female-friendly service sector.

4.65 The delegation met the Director of the Institute of International Relations, Professor W. Andy Knight who spoke on the development of a new Diplomatic Academy of the Caribbean. This new academy will, it is hoped, turn Trinidad & Tobago into a diplomatic hub in the region. It was noted by the Leader of the Delegation that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in the UK has created its own Diplomatic Academy which could work with its Trinidad & Tobago equivalent in developing courses and programmes. Such courses led to the discussion of promoting more online courses. UWI saw this as an avenue to explore further. It already provided such courses, but it would help in broadening its regional and global reach both in terms of students and academic partnerships.

4.66 ACTION: As part of its meeting with UWI, the delegation will communicate with relevant organisations to undertake the following actions:

- Communicate with the FCO Diplomatic Academy on its University of the West Indies equivalent and ways of developing further links.

4.7 Corruption

4.70 Trinidad & Tobago is placed 85th in the global ranking of Transparency International’s Corruption Perception Index. This is mid table position, both globally and within the Americas region. Corruption is a big problem across the Caribbean. In the case of Trinidad & Tobago it is focused most prominently in the public sector and in particular in the awarding of contracts and procurement. The most well-known case relates to contracts for the development of Piarco Airport. As outlined by the new Attorney General and Leader of the Opposition, public sector corruption remains a tough issue to tackle on small islands. It is difficult, especially for politicians to disassociate themselves from interested parties. However substantial progress has been made with legislation on procurement and tendering as well as campaign finance. In addition, the Integrity Commission continues to fight corruption although it is perceived by the electorate as ineffective. The Minister of Works and Infrastructure felt that there should be a public tribunal which would look at various integrity cases. Trinidad & Tobago also recently launched a Caribbean chapter of the Global Organisation of Parliamentarians against Corruption.

4.71 Whilst in Trinidad & Tobago, the delegation witnessed the continuing scandal related to accusations against the former Attorney General for witness tampering as well as a number of other scandals related to ‘emailgate’ and ‘section 34’. There was a general feeling expressed by the Leader of the Opposition that such scandals detracted attention away from more important and pressing problems like gang and drug related crime.

4.8 Relations with the UK

4.80 In all the meetings held, it was clear that relations between Trinidad & Tobago and the United Kingdom are positive and productive, however this relationship should not be taken for granted. The President expressed his gratitude to the UK Government’s ongoing support to Trinidad & Tobago on the international stage, especially in respect to sponsoring judicial appointments. The President was eager for the UK to support Trinidad & Tobago in its willingness to host the Secretariat of the United Nations Arms Trade Treaty. He felt passionately that having the Secretariat in Trinidad & Tobago would go a long way to tackling a major issue in a country heavily effected by small arms use.

4.81 The British High Commission is active in supporting Trinidad & Tobago on a number of areas such as criminal justice via the joint Canada-UK Criminal Justice Adviser (CJA). The CJA works with key stakeholders in the criminal justice sector including the Ministry of Justice, Attorney General, Chief Justice, Director of Public Prosecutions, Commissioner of Police and the Director of the Financial Investigation Unit. The continued work of the CJA is providing a solid platform for much-needed reform across the criminal justice spectrum. The British Government is also active in tackling the drug trade by supporting the police and coastguard.

4.82 Although the reduction in the Air Passenger Duty has gone a long way in improving the public’s perception of the UK, it was felt by the delegation that introducing any visa restrictions for visitors to the UK from Trinidad and Tobago will have a negative impact on relations. They felt that further work was needed on both sides to ensure a mutually beneficial outcome.

4.9 Relations with the Commonwealth

4.90 At the meeting with the President of Trinidad & Tobago there was a sense of disappointment with the Commonwealth Secretariat and the Commonwealth Heads of Government (CHOGM) on its lack of comment and condemnation on international crises. He highlighted the failure of the Secretary-General to issue statements on the downing of Malaysia Airlines flight MH17 or statements on countries that clearly flout the Commonwealth Charter.

4.92 Although there were some discussions on the Caribbean’s candidate for the next Secretary-General, no clear indication was given despite the possibility of Rt Hon. Baroness Scotland QC and Sir Ronald Saunders standing. Since the delegation returned to the UK, CARICOM has failed to determine a single candidate to nominate.

4.10 Tobago

4.100 On the final day of the programme the delegation went to Tobago. Whilst there they met with Members of the House of Assembly. The House is not a law-making body but does have a budgetary and policy role centred on economic development, land management, tourism, agriculture and fisheries. It was clear that the Assembly does not wish to be viewed as a local government, as such they are neither members of the CPA or the CLGA. Currently all Assemblymen are comprised of the same party, the People’s National Movement. In discussions, it was raised that Tobago seeks further autonomy from Trinidad and negotiations are ongoing, but there was no evidence from any Trinadian interlocutors that this would be successful. The delegation felt that in the interim, Tobago should explore greater business rates which could augment their budget and economic autonomy, perhaps modelling it on the UK local authority system.
4.101 The delegation went to Scarborough General Hospital in Tobago. Recently opened, the hospital had been built with funding from China. The delegation were impressed by the high standards of care available on the Island. The hospital is vital for continued tourist investment, especially in providing emergency care for passing cruise liners. However there remained some concerns in managing tourist healthcare. Medical staff indicated that additional administrative support was needed in the repatriation of British tourists who travelled without appropriate insurance.

4.102 ACTION: As part of its meetings with the House of Assembly Presiding Officer, Mr Kelvin Charles the delegation will undertake the following actions:

- Review the possibility of a group of young Tobaggian politics students coming to Westminster in 2015 for a programme looking at the parliamentary origins of the Westminster System.
- Inform the High Commission of the issue related to repatriation for UK visitors.
- Explore what support UK local authorities could provide Tobago in further developing a rates system.

4.11 Parliamentary & Constitutional Reform

4.110 The core aim and objectives of the programme was to examine the political structure, practices and reforms of the Parliament of Trinidad & Tobago. During the course of the week, the delegation met a number of parliamentarians who expressed a positive view of Parliament’s current transition, many of which are mirrored in the UK. The most obvious is the refurbishment of the Red House, which as in the case of the UK Parliament, is in need of substantial structural preservation. Nevertheless it is the fundamental changes that relate to Parliament’s procedural and structural reforms that are the most comprehensive. As part of a five year strategic plan designed with support of UNDP, the Parliament of Trinidad & Tobago will become far more autonomous institution than currently stands. There are plans underway to expand its scrutiny and administrative capacity to ensure greater separation from Government influence. Some of the reforms mentioned by the Speaker and President of the Senate were:

- Parliamentarians are to become full-time salaried Members
- A movement towards a ‘paperless’ parliament
- Development of a Parliamentary Service Authority
- Coordination of a full parliamentary calendar with predetermined times for business
- Update of Standing Orders
- Greater pre and post legislative scrutiny supported by a new Legal Department
- Prime Minister’s Question Time
- Creation of a Human Rights & Diversity Committee and Energy & Environment Committee as well as other newer Committees like the Foreign Affairs Committee
- Structured and uniform constituency relations offices
- Constituency development funds/programme

4.111 In addition to these parliamentary reforms, there are also constitutional changes afoot. The Constitutional Amendment Bill introduced in August 2014 will bring in three notable changes to the political landscape. Namely, a term limit for the Prime Minister, the right to recall MPs and a

34 Strategic plan of the Parliament of the Republic of Trinidad & Tobago 2013-18 required 50 percent majority vote for a chosen candidate at elections.\textsuperscript{35} These proposed amendments have now been passed by both Chambers.

4.112 In discussions with some parliamentarians, the delegation noted the pressure that Members of Committees were now under due to recent reforms. Additional workload due to the increase in the number of Committee coupled with the part-time employment of Members made it difficult to prioritise work. Although there was a desire by Parliament to make parliamentarians fulltime, this was met with indifference by some who did not want to cease there other professional activities.

5. OUTCOMES & FOLLOW-UP ACTIVITIES

5.0 To continue the ongoing positive relationship with the Parliament of Trinidad & Tobago, CPA UK will offer a reciprocal inward visit to the UK Houses of Parliament following the General Election in May 2015. When planning the topical issues to cover in the reciprocal visit, CPA UK will liaise with UNDP to ensure issues covered are relevant to their ongoing work. CPA UK will also continue to invite participants to its Westminster Workshop in Malta in June, Westminster Seminar in November and thematic conferences later in the year.

5.1 At the meeting with the UNDP Programme Officers in Port of Spain, CPA UK offered ongoing assistance to UNDP to support the Parliament in its ongoing strategic development. To that end Ms Jessica Mulley, Head of the Scrutiny Unit participated in a roundtable with Trinidadian Parliamentarians on post-legislative scrutiny in March 2015.

5.2 Following its meeting with Gregory Delzin in Port of Spain, CPA UK will organise a Lunchtime Lecture on the Death Penalty in the Caribbean in July 2015. Its purpose will be to engage newly elected UK parliamentarians on the complex issues within the region.

5.3 CPA UK will ensure the listed actions stated throughout the report will be carried out in a timely manner and will monitor further follow-up activities that occur as a result. Where applicable liaising with a nominated Member of the delegation after the May 2015 election.

5.4 Following the visit to Tobago, CPA UK will continue its engagement with the House of Assembly and the Ministry of Tobago Development in engaging young people in the political and parliamentary process. CPA UK will assist Baroness Benjamin OBE in her proposed visit to Tobago in mid-2015.

5.5 Provide possible support to the FCO on a forthcoming Wilton Park Conference on “Caribbean 2030: new thinking for a new generation” which takes place in June. CPA UK will assist in sourcing a parliamentary speaker.

6. FUNDING BREAKDOWN

6.0 CPA UK allocated £30,000 to cover the costs of the programme. Spending totalled £21,750.00 resulting in an under-spend of £8,250.00.
