

Editorial Policy

The Journal of Caribbean International Relations encourages research concerning international relations in general, and Caribbean international relations in particular. The Journal invites contributions from extra-regional as well as regional scholars and practitioners, and from younger as well as senior scholars and practitioners. This peer-reviewed journal, which is published by the UWI Graduate Institute of International Relations, encourages independent and critical thinking concerning theoretical as well as policy-relevant aspects of international relations.