CALL FOR PAPERS: A Gendered Culture Of Violence

The Centre for Gender and Development Studies has opened a call for papers for a special issue of the Caribbean Review of Gender Studies. The topic of the special issue is "A Gendered Culture of Violence in Trinidad and Tobago-A Caribbean Case Study". This special issue will feature papers interrogating the present 'culture of violence' in Trinidad and Tobago. It will also focus on representations of gendered and family violence within the Caribbean region, drawing out the root causes and insidious effects on both individuals and society.

Submissions on the theme will be welcomed in academic enquiries from a range and mix of disciplinary foci: creative writing, short personal and fictive narratives and poems and visual representations which are appropriate for online publications.

Guidelines for submissions may be accessed at the journal's website:
