COURSE TITLE: INTERNATIONAL TRADE THEORY AND POLICY

COURSE CODE: ECON 3006

LEVEL: UNDERGRADUATE LEVEL (FINAL YEAR)

NO OF CREDITS: 3

PREREQUISITES: ECON 1001, ECON 1002

COURSE DESCRIPTION / RATIONALE:

This course covers, the theory of international trade including alternative theories of trade: the structure of world trade and the main factors influencing trade: the relationship between trade, growth and development and international trade policy. The course maintains a perspective on the Caribbean.

This course will be taught via an online media through lectures (2 hours) and tutorials (1 hour). The teaching approach will be interactive where the student's input and feedback are encouraged. The course comprises of a combination of theoretical, quantitative and practical empirical components. The course will be assessed through various continuous assessments.

This course fits well with the mission of the Department and the University in terms of its contribution to preparing students with an in-depth knowledge of trade issues that affect the development of Caribbean economies.

PURPOSE OF THE COURSE

Students are expected to become familiar with the basics of international trade and the implications of different events on the short and long run growth possibilities of an economy. Additionally students would become more aware of the various linkages among the international, regional and hence national levels of economic activity.

The course exists so that students can better understand the fundamentals of what international trade is about particularly for small open economies like those in the Caribbean. International trade is an integral part of every country's economy, thus it is important to understand the dynamics of what a country decides to export and import and the countries they decide to trade with. It is also important to grasp the interconnections between economies particularly as the world becomes more integrated.
