Let's Talk Consent and CSE (Comprehensive Sex Education)

This seminar presentation will be an interactive discussion on tools for preventing gender based violence through frameworks of sexual rights and sex positivity. The presenters will share knowledge and materials created through the completed human rights project "A Sexual Culture of Justice" and advocacy for social change and advancement of sexual rights. This seminar will offer practical engagement in how we transform harmful gender and sexual norms, and relatedly, how we build a culture of consent and empowerment around sex and sexuality. Community based actions on GBV prevention and research findings on gender based bullying in schools will provide evidence and offer pathways for new approaches in our work to end GBV.

About SCJ

"A Sexual Culture of Justice: Strengthening LGBTQI & GBV Partnerships, Capacity & Efficacy to Promote & Protect Rights in T&T" (2017-2021) was an EU-funded human rights project implemented by The UWI IGDS in partnership with several civil society organisations. The project focused on the intersections of gender and sexual justice. We envisioned this "sexual culture of justice" as advocacy for social change to gender norms and sexual rights. This community-university collaboration provided four years of support for long-standing and new efforts to transform approaches to violence, homophobia, bullying and policing, while building organisational capacity.

The project produced new local/regional analysis and solutions for ways to approach and mitigate gender based violence and LGBTQI discrimination. These approaches were developed and showcased through the intersectional action campaigns, education materials, training toolkits and workshops, as well as the research activities that produced data needed to support calls for gender and sexual justice policy and legislative changes. The methodology of the activities were rooted in transformational education, empowerment, Caribbean feminist praxis, and self-directed and creative action.
