

A SEXUAL CULTURE OF JUSTICE:

Strengthening LGBTQI & GBV Partnerships, Capacity & Efficacy to Promote & Protect Rights in T&T

Lead Researcher: Dr. Angelique V. Nixon, IGDS. Funded by the European Union.

This activity-based, human rights project was implemented by The University of the West Indies, Institute for Gender and Development Studies (IGDS) in formal collaboration with six LGBTI and feminist organisations in Trinidad and Tobago: CAISO, Friends for Life, I Am One, The Silver Lining Foundation, The Women's Caucus, and WOMANTRA. Other partners included: Caribbean IRN, Caribbean Male Action Network, Say Something TT, and Transgender Coalition.

This project provided four years of support for long-standing and new local efforts to transform approaches to violence, homophobia, school bullying and policing, while building partnerships and organisational capacity.

Continuing projects include the "Add All Three" campaign and advocacy for the LGBTI+ Policy Agenda.

The "Add All Three" campaign seeks to expand protections in the Equal Opportunity Act based on Age, Health Conditions, and LGBTI Status.

The Policy Agenda, created using project research and input from the community, targets government ministries and agencies who must do more to address the needs of LGBTI communities, to prevent violence, to protect rights, and to end discriminatory practices, related to employment, housing, healthcare, and social services.

Description & Methodology

The project produced new local/regional analysis and solutions for ways to approach and mitigate gender based violence and LGBTQI discrimination.

These approaches were developed and showcased through the intersectional action campaigns, education materials, training toolkits and workshops, as well as the research activities that produced data needed to support calls for gender and sexual justice policy and legislative changes.

The methodology of the activities were rooted in transformational education, empowerment, Caribbean feminist praxis, and self-directed and creative action.

Leave Me Alone Campaign

Leave Me Alone is a campaign using Calypso Rose's 2017 song "Leave Me Alone" to bring attention to Gender Based Violence within the Carnival space. We partnered with SaySomething and CariMAN to launch this campaign on 14 February, 2017, where we went to the Brian Lara Promenade and asked the general public some questions related to street harassment and violence against women.

This seminar presentation will be an interactive discussion on tools for preventing gender based violence through frameworks of sexual rights and sex positivity. The presenters will share knowledge and materials created through the completed human rights project “A Sexual Culture of Justice” and advocacy for social change and advancement of sexual rights. This seminar will offer practical engagement in how we transform harmful gender and sexual norms, and relatedly, how we build a culture of consent and empowerment around sex and sexuality. Community based actions on GBV prevention and research findings on gender based bullying in schools will provide evidence and offer pathways for new approaches in our work to end GBV.

5 Why Sexual Rights and Justice?

As scholars, practitioners, and activists have argued, the control over women and girls' bodies and sexuality increases gender-based violence and places severe limitations on mobility, education, employment, and participation in public life. In similar ways, lesbians, gay men, bisexual people, transgender and gender non-conforming people, intersex people, sex workers, and others who transgress sexual and gender norms face greater risk of violence, stigma, and discrimination as a result of controlling mechanisms around sex and sexuality. Sexual and reproductive health professionals, sexual rights activists, and feminist scholars have long agreed that sexual rights underpin the enjoyment of all other human rights and are necessary for equity and justice for all.

Institute for Gender and Development Studies, St. Augustine Unit, Trinidad & Tobago
Prepared by Angelique Nixon and Psyche Gonzales. Published December 2021.

Sexual rights are deeply connected to understandings of sexual citizenship, which means our rights and protection under the law related to sexuality. Human rights and LGBTQI activist Colin Robinson argues that we must not place too much emphasis on law and litigation in our struggles for sexual autonomy, but rather be guided and led by local and regional solutions. Transforming cultural norms related to gender and sexuality are just as important as law and litigation.

Institute for Gender and Development Studies, St. Augustine Unit, Trinidad & Tobago
Prepared by Angelique Nixon and Psyche Gonzales. Published December 2021.

6 Why Comprehensive Sex Education (CSE)?

Young people must negotiate complex social, technological, sexual, and gendered spaces. The IGDS Break the Silence Research Project supports long standing and global research that shows CSE can prevent child sexual abuse, incest, sexual bullying and teenage pregnancy. CSE can help young people understand their bodies and sexualities, and empower them to make more informed decisions about sex, relationships, and consent.

In two recent reports in Trinidad and Tobago, the evidence is compelling that young people need and want access to comprehensive sex education. The 2020 Report on Legal Barriers to Sexual and Reproductive Health for Adolescents shows that young people lack access to information and services which has devastating effects on their well being. The National Climate Survey 2019 Report found that 65% percent of students surveyed believe that with CSE they will be better prepared to handle sexual situations.

Institute for Gender and Development Studies, St. Augustine Unit, Trinidad & Tobago
Prepared by Angelique Nixon and Psyche Gonzales. Published December 2021.

Comprehensive Sex Education (CSE) means teaching and understanding consent, bodily autonomy, and mutual respect. These reports reveal how necessary it is for young people to be empowered and included in the creation of an enabling and safe learning environment for all students. This means teachers and counsellors must be supported and better equipped to provide social, emotional, and social justice learning, as well as creative strategies and restorative justice approaches to dealing with violence.

Institute for Gender and Development Studies, St. Augustine Unit, Trinidad & Tobago
Prepared by Angelique Nixon and Psyche Gonzales. Published December 2021.

7 What is "A Sexual Culture of Justice"?

"A Sexual Culture of Justice: Strengthening LGBTQI & GBV Partnerships, Capacity & Efficacy to Promote & Protect Rights in T&T" (2017-2021) was an EU-funded human rights project implemented by the UWI IGDS in partnership with several civil society organisations. The project focused on the intersections of gender and sexual justice. We envisioned this "sexual culture of justice" as advocacy for social change to gender norms and sexual rights. This collaboration provided four years of support for long-standing and new efforts to transform approaches to violence, homophobia, bullying and policing, while building organisational capacity.

The project produced new local/regional analysis and solutions for ways to approach and mitigate GBV and LGBTQI discrimination. These approaches were developed and showcased through the intersectional action campaigns, education materials, training toolkits and workshops, as well as the research activities that produced data needed to support calls for gender and sexual justice policy and legislative changes. The methodology of the activities were rooted in transformational education, empowerment, Caribbean feminist praxis, and self-directed and creative action.
