LUNCHTIME SEMINARS WEDNESDAYS – 12 NOON

Terry D. Ince is a Social Entrepreneur, Consultant and Human Rights Activist with a post-graduate degree in Organizational Development and Behavior and Project Management certification. With a focus on Women's Economic and Political empowerment, she has worked extensively with private and public sector institutions and Non-Governmental Organizations in Trinidad and Tobago and the United States of America. She has trained women locally and regionally on transformational leadership and has participated in public consultations for local and international organizations, government ministries and Civil Society. She actively engages in local, regional and international discourse on women's issues relative to the MDGs, SDGs, and CEDAW and participated in recent sessions of the UN Commission on the Status of Women and the Inaugural Women's forum at CHOGM as part of Civil Society delegations. She has observed local, sub-national and general elections in Trinidad and Tobago and was a member of the Commonwealth Observer Group for the general elections in Tanzania in 2015. She has volunteered on several US National elections campaigns and is an active member-volunteer with several local and international non-governmental organizations. She was born and formally educated in Trinidad.

IGDS Seminar Room, The UWI, St. Augustine Campus

The government of Trinidad and Tobago's Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Seventh combined Periodic report under the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) will be reviewed in Geneva in July 2016. IGDS and several Non-Governmental Organizations in Trinidad and Tobago have agreed to support the creation of a shadow report of the same period to be submitted and reviewed. This lunch time seminar aims to bring awareness to the process while encouraging input to the final document.
