Sensing Thinking Learner (ST)

- Likes:
  - Immediate responses and feedback
  - Details and sequential order
  - Hands-on activities with a specific, correct answer
  - Clear, concise, step-by-step directions
  - Knowing exact expectations; why something has to be done, and how well it is to be done
  - Drill and practice
Intuitive Thinking Learner (NT)

- Likes:
  - Planning and organizing before working
  - Working independently
  - Analyzing and examining pros and cons
  - Arguing and debating
  - Thinking about ideas and how they are related
  - Finding/designing a new way to do something
  - Logical and strategic games
Intuitive Feeling Learner (NF)

Likes:
- Learning without time constraints
- Praise for personal ideas and insights
- Using creativity and imagination
- Open-ended activities with many possibilities
- Working on many things at once
- Self-expression and self-discovery
- Creative and artistic activities
Sensing Feeling Learner (SF)

Likes:
- Getting personal attention and praise
- Sharing feelings and experiences
- Working in groups/being part of a team
- Having someone show how to do something
- Role-playing and personal expression
- Non-competitive games where no one loses
- Interpersonal activities; opportunities to learn about himself/herself
What is your learning style?

- Sensing Thinking (ST)
- Intuitive Thinking (NT)
- Intuitive Feeling (NF)
- Sensing Feeling (SF)
Questions:

- Sensing Thinking (ST): WHAT?
- Intuitive Thinking (NT): WHY?
- Intuitive Feeling (NF): WHAT IF?
- Sensing Feeling (SF): WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO ME?
In A Nutshell...

- No one learning style is better than another.
- We all have characteristics of each learning style; some characteristics are just stronger than others.
- Learning about each style will help us to better understand and communicate with our students.
- Knowing about each learning style will help teachers to better understand how students learn and how to differentiate instruction.